Spiritual Thought

We've just finished this month's 'floor bashing' – entering the church the sound was like descending into Nibelheim, the sound of hammers and chisels. But, if you look at the floor at the back of the church, under the pews on your left hand side you'll see something unseen for 50 years – the original floor of the church. Thank you to the 15 who worked so hard.

The restoration of the church is an immense work – returning the building to its former glory, to the beauty it once had, a beauty which is hinted at by what we see. There is a spiritual lesson in this also – since it's foundation, the church which Jesus founded has been decayed and restored many times. The great and most famous saints often arose at a time of decay, but through their work, holiness and fidelity they were able to restore the holiness of the church.

We can remember the prophetic words of Jesus to St. Francis in the church of San Damiano "Francis, rebuild my church". St Francis took these words literally and restored the ruined church of San Damiano – but then, through the poverty of his friars, restored holiness to the church. This culminated in the dream of Pope Innocent – he saw a church (the Lateran Basilica) on the brink of collapse, held up and made secure by a poor friar. He didn't understand this dream until St. Francis and his companions, having walked to Rome from Umbria, arrived for an audience, and Pope Innocent recognized the poor friar as St. Francis.

We may be tempted to see only the difficulties and decay of the church – which has been widely reported, and is the material for many stand-up comics. We hear of the scandals which have sadly driven so many from the church, and harmed the dear people of the church. Decay, corruption, infidelity.

We might be waiting for a great saint to help us, another Francis, or Benedict, or Teresa or Ignatius. Another saint who will remove the rust and ruin from the church and let it shine with love.

But maybe God wants us too to help with the great restoration of the church. At this moment, we are called to become holier, to become more faithful, to uncover the true beauty of the church. To become more and more full of the love of God that decay has no place, that the spiritual building of the church shines with his glory.

How fortunate we are to be able to work for such a beautiful goal, and what wonderful helpers we have, on earth and in heaven, for this great work.

A Huge Thank You

As many of you many know, Norman, our wonderful organist for the 6pm Saturday and alternate Sundays at 11am is retiring. I'm very grateful that he has stayed on for my first few weeks (he had expressed his desire to retire to Fr. Kevin some months ago). We are all grateful to him and Dawn for their dedication and talent. May God bless and reward him in his semi-retirement, we'll be seeing him again for weddings and funerals hopefully.
